

About

The Colson Center equips Christians with the clarity, confidence, and courage in this cultural moment. Their podcasts, digital resources, and programs including Breakpoint, the Identity Project, What Would You Say? video series, Colson Fellows program and Colson Educators courses equip hundreds of thousands of Christians each year with the clarity they need to celebrate good, resist evil, create what's missing, and restore what's broken right where God has placed them. The Colson Center

WHAT IS IT?

The Colson Center exists to equip Christians to live with clarity, confidence, and courage in this cultural moment. The Colson Center provides training programs, video resources, and cultural commentary to help people understand who they are as part of God's story and be people of hope in the world.

WHO IS IT FOR?

1

Pastors equipping their churches with a biblical understanding of identity.

2

Teachers committed to incorporating faith-based values into the classroom.

3

Parents raising kids to ground their identity in God.

4

Christians having conversations with friends, family, and coworkers about identity.

5

Policymakers shaping legislation for the common good.

6

Counselors integrating biblical perspectives about identity into client care.

PRODUCTS

Educational Media

The Identity Project: The Identity Project is a digital platform that helps Christians understand and live out their God-given identities. Through engaging videos from subject matter experts on topics from identity and sexuality to marriage and parenthood, believers will be well-equipped to speak truth and contribute to a flourishing society.

What Would You Say?: Our What Would You Say? short videos provide clear answers to hard questions about faith and life. They're easy to watch and share, so you can talk about what you believe with confidence.

Cultural Commentary

Breakpoint: Breakpoint is a 5-minute daily commentary (radio and podcast) where John Stonestreet takes a daily look at culture through the lens of unchanging truth.

Breakpoint This Week: Breakpoint This Week is a one-hour podcast hosted by John Stonestreet and Maria Baer which takes a look at the top stories from the week from a Christian worldview. (New episodes every Friday).

Strong Women: Strong Women is a podcast for women who find their hope, courage, and calling in a faithful God. Engaging guests cover topics like family, relationships, and culture, sharing inspiring stories of women who live with a courageous faith right where they are.

Training

Colson Fellows program: The Colson Fellows Program is a 9-month worldview formation program for busy men and women in all stages of life. The program takes a deep dive into Christian worldview to equip you to live like a Christian right where God has called you.

Colson Educators program: The Colson Educators Program equips educators to teach with clarity, confidence, and courage in their classrooms through free digital courses and professional development programs.

Events

The Colson Center National Conference: The Colson Center National Conference is an annual event where Christians gather to be equipped by leading and emerging voices on the issues of the day. They feature talks and workshops to equip you with God's truth for living boldly in today's culture.

Breakpoint Live Forums: Breakpoint Forums dive into key issues related to faith and culture. These events, whether online or in-person, are deep dive conversations that help Christians understand and speak God's truth with confidence. (Offered as regional, in person events and livestreamed digital events).
